Historic Marker Installation Set

Upvalley Bureau

Carbonate — At one time, there were three Carbonate historical markers. The monument erected by the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission at the three primary roads of the City of Carbonate, White Crossing, Fallbrook Road, and Route 6

The Whites Crossing marker is in good condition. The Fallbrook Road historical marker has disappeared. The Route 6 historical marker recently was damaged by snow and badly damaged by major weathering. The Committee to Restore Carbonate City Hall Inc., an independent group of Carbonate citizens who are interested in preserving and restoring the city's architecture and cultural heritage, has rescued this badly damaged historical marker and has had it restored. In the future, the marker might be read by the greatest number of people possible, the committee will install it in the small plot of land between City Hall and Collins via Hose Co. Ceremonies will be conducted Sept. 25 at which time the marker will be installed and formally re-dedicated.
